SUPERVISION STANDARDS

Probation: Jail sentence + community supervision

Parole: Prison sentence + community supervision

Community supervision of probationers and parolees is relatively the same; however, probationers report to a judge, while parolees report to the Board of Pardons.

Full-time employment and/or education, random drug testing, counseling, restitution, and community service are common conditions of probation/parole.

Approximately 3,000 inmates are paroled from prison each year in Utah. Of those released, nationally, around 65% will return to prison within 3 years. Of those, over 80% will be unemployed at the time of their arrest.

The recidivism rate for the local county jails is substantially higher than that of the prison due to offenders being constantly in and out of custody pending adjudication of their cases, probation violations, or serving sentences for offenses which are not eligible for a prison commitment.

TAX LIABILITY

- Approximate cost to house an inmate in the Utah State Prison = $28,000/per year
- Approximate cost to supervise an offender in the community = $2,700/per year

Utah Defendant Offender Workforce Development Task Force (UDOWD)

Mission Statement: Unite offenders and employers by assisting offenders with employment options, job readiness training, and employment application assistance.

HISTORY

The UDOWD Task Force was established in the fall of 2009. It consists of members from state, federal and local law enforcement, along with non-profit and religious organizations whose primary goal is to assist ex-offenders obtain employment and learn how to become productive members of society.

Some of these agencies include:

- Utah Department of Corrections
- U.S. Probation/Pretrial Services
- Utah State Office of Rehabilitation
- Department of Workforce Services
- Federal Bureau of Prisons
- Local Law Enforcement Agencies
- Utah Federal Defender's Office
- Faith-Based/Non-Profit Organizations

HIRING INCENTIVES

Work Opportunity Tax Credit: Employers can receive up to $2,400 for each ex-offender they employ. For more information about this program: www.doleta.gov/business/incentives/opntax/

Federal Bonding Program: This program provides employers with bonding insurance from $5,000 to $25,000 for certain perceived "high-risk" applicants. For more information regarding this program, go to: www.bonds4jobs.com

Additional tax credits, incentives and support may be available. To learn more, contact the UDOWD representative in your community.

EMPLOYEE INCENTIVE

Ex-offenders are commonly more motivated than most employees as they feel they have something to prove to themselves, their families and society in general. Being under supervision also mandates they maintain stable employment and undergo counseling and random drug testing, which is generally an ultimate savings to most employers.
